

BritishEco.com
Woman & Home
June 2008

A BRAND NEW ATTITUDE!

woman & home

"Solar power is saving us money!"

Anne Norris, 54, is a dispatcher and lives in a three-bedroomed semi in Harlow, Essex with her husband Gil

"I've always been concerned about the environment so when my husband suggested installing a solar thermal heating system in our home I thought it was a brilliant idea. We had a look online and decided on the Solartwin model from British Eco because it produces a zero carbon footprint. The system cost £3,100 and took less than a day to install. We've had it for around a year now and it's already saving us money – our last quarterly bill only cost £8 instead of £150 and we're hoping it will reduce our energy outgoings by 70 per cent overall. It's so satisfying to have a bath knowing it was heated for free. Renewable energy really is the way of the future." www.britisheco.com.